In this class we will explore the philosophical foundations of human rights, investigating theories of how our shared humanity in the context of an interdependent world gives rise to obligations of justice. We will begin with influential historical treatments of justice beyond the boundaries of the nation, starting with the Roman philosopher and statesman Cicero’s defense of universal justice on the basis of cosmopolitanism and ending with Immanuel Kant’s attempt to ground international justice in the idea of a peaceful order of nations. We will then move on to contemporary theories of human rights that draw on this rich tradition. First, we will consider John Rawls’ liberal reimagining of Kant’s project in on The Law of Peoples. Next we will consider Martha Nussbaum’s reimagining of Cicero’s project in her capabilities approach. Throughout we will be asking questions such as, “What makes something a human right?” “What role does the nation and the individual play in our account of human rights?” “When can one nation legitimately intervene in the affairs of another nation?” “How can we respect the demands of justice while also respecting cultural difference?” And so on. (This course is the first of three courses in the core sequence of the Human Rights Program. For more information on the human rights program, visit http://humanrights.uchicago.edu/.)

Course Website: This course has a chalk. You should get in the habit of checking the website at least once a week. To access the chalk go to www.uchicago.edu and click on “student”. Chalk should appear as a button on the left hand side. Clicking on that should take you to a list of chalks for the courses in which you are enrolled. All readings, aside from John Rawls can be found on the chalk for this course under the “assignments” button, grouped in folders by week. You will also be able to find this syllabus, and contact information for your CA and me. Course material (paper assignments, handouts, study guides, etc.) will regularly be made available on the site.

Grading:

- Final Exam: 30%
- Paper One: 30%
- Paper Two: 30%
- Participation: 10%

For due dates for papers, consult the syllabus below. Papers will be penalized at 1/3 of a letter grade for each day they are late. Participation credit accrues to those who regularly attend both the lecture and discussion sections, and who participate actively in discussions there. Credit is also given for evident effort and improvement. Note that if you decide to take this class pass/fail, you must make your request by the end of 5th week.

Required Texts

There are two required texts for this course: Martha Nussbaum’s Frontiers of Justice, and John Rawls’ The Law of Peoples. These texts are available at the Seminary Coop Bookstore. All other readings will be available on Chalk.
